JMSC6022 Media law

Lecturer: Mr. Danny Gittings, Honorary Lecturer

The course introduces students to the laws relating to freedom of expression, defamation, privacy, information access, contempt of court, obscenity and regulatory schemes for broadcast and the Internet. It also examines the legality of newsgathering practice such as undercover reporting, deception and the use of hidden cameras. While the course focuses on Hong Kong, the course will also address major media law developments in Mainland China, the United Kingdom, the United States and elsewhere.

JMSC6090 Reporting Health and Medicine

Lecturer: Mr. Thomas Abraham, Director of the Public Health Media Project & Associate Professor of Practice

This course will be a mixture of theory and practice, with lectures from experts from the Faculty of Medicine and field trips and visits to hospitals and health facilities. Students will also report and write stories for an online newswire.

JMSC6025 Literary journalism

Lecturer: Mr. Mike Meyer, Honorary Lecturer

This course demonstrates how journalism can rise to the level of quality non-fiction literature. Students will read a rich variety of journalistic works of recognized quality produced in English in Asia and abroad, and analyze why they succeed on both a literary and journalistic level. The class will identify the tools and techniques writers employ to construct evocative and enduring true stories. Over this journey, students will become better readers and better writers.

JMSC6027 Covering China

Lecturer: Prof. Ying Chan, JMSC Director & Professor

The course introduces students to the methods, as well as the ethical and cultural issues, involved in reporting on contemporary China. The course examines the public information structure in the People's Republic of China, news sources and the use of published documents and statistics, with special focus on the politics and economy of China. It will also give an overview of the state of the media and news topics in China.

JMSC6046 Media research: concepts and methods

Lecturers: Dr. Miklos Sukosd, Associate Professor and Dr. King-wa Fu, Research Assistant Professor

This course is offered for students interested in research on media contents, communication processes, or media users. On the one hand, we cover major conceptual approaches to media events, media language, comparative media studies and the political economy of the media. On the other hand, we explore qualitative and quantitative methods in media research, including content analysis and surveys. So are you interested in preparing a public opinion poll on a hot topic in town? Do you want to know how to analyze political rhetorics? Ever wondered who owns media groups in China and Hong Kong? If your answer is yes to any of the above, this course is designed for you.
